MOKENA IN XMAS LIGHTING CONTEST

VISITS BATTLE FIELD WHERE FATHER FOUGHT

George Brandau, Frankfort, local representative of the Ruhn Phosphate Co., returned Friday night from a trip to Mt. Pleasant, Tenn. His sojourn down in the sunny southland was on a short combined business and pleasure trip. Mr. Brandau reports seeing many historical sights and personally set foot on the battleground at Franklin, Tenn., where his father was wounded during the Civil war.

Mr. Brandau also saw the homes of President Polk at Columbia, Tenn., and of General Jackson "The Hermitage" at Nashville.

Mt. Pleasant is a little over 50 miles south of Nashville and there is found one of the greatest raw phosphate deposits in the world. The population of the town is 3,000.

Mr. Brandau was the recipient of true southern hospitality. Tennessee according to him is a beautiful state. While there he saw the mining and processing of the product he sells which was indeed interesting and educational.

Tinley Girl Assigned To New Train

Miss Ruth Funk, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Funk of Tinley Park who has been employed as a stewardess on the crack Rock Island train "The Californian" the past three years, has been promoted and has been assigned to the fine new streamliner Arizona train which goes into service over the Rock Island Lines on December 17th. Together with a number of other stewardesses, Miss Funk will be feasted on the arrival of the streamliner in Tucson, Arizona. Miss Funk was home this week and left Wednesday night. She will make her final run on the California train this week. Miss Funk has been highly honored to be assigned to the new streamliner.

New Lenox Resident Dies At Age of 82

Mrs. Margaret Hanrahan Regan, aged 82 years, died in the home of her son Robert in New Lenox last Sunday morning at two o'clock. Beside her husband Charles, and a son who is a guard at the Illinois State Penitentiary, she is survived by three daughters and three other sons.

The body was shipped to Chipewa Falls, Wis., for funeral services and burial.

Chas. Yuill, New Lenox Passes Away

Chas. R. Yuill, resident of New Lenox for the past several years and who has been an employee of the Rock Island at the Hamilton Park office for thirty years, died in the Silver Cross hospital Tuesday following a brief illness.

Mr. Yuill is survived by his wife, one son Charles, Jr., three daughters, Mrs. H. Kauffman, Mrs. Donald Storm and Mrs. W. W. Wright. A grand daughter Dorothy, Mrs. Wm. Walker made her home with the Yuills since childhood until her marriage.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at two o'clock from the Lain & Son Funeral Chapel at 63rd and Harvard in Chicago with the Rev. Mr. L. Clark of Joliet officiating.

Hold Bridal Shower In Green Garden Hall

Mrs. Stanley Williams and Mrs. Arthur Marti were hostesses at a miscellaneous bridal shower honoring Miss Marietta Rahm on Sunday afternoon December 1st at the Green Garden Town Hall. The honored guest opened her many beautiful and useful gifts after which areo-plane bunco was played. Prizes were awarded and a guest prize to the honored guest. A delicious lunch was served to about 60 relatives and close friends. Miss Rahm is to become the bride of Franklin Christianson Sunday afternoon, December 8th at the St. Peter's Evan, and Reformed Church in Frankfort, the ceremony to take place at 3 o'clock. The many friends of the bride-to-be are invited to attend.

Miss Rahm also was honored at the home of Mrs. Lester Christiansen Tuesday evening, Nov. 26 with a personal shower. She received many beautiful gifts. Bunco was played. Prizes were awarded to Mrs. Clarence Lauffer and Marietta Christiansen and a guest prize went to Miss Rahm. A two course lunch was served. Favors were carried out in the bride-to-be chosen colors of Rose and blue.

Sign Up Fire Dept. Members

Petitions are being circulated in New Lenox to secure members for the new fire department. Quite a number of volunteer firemen have signed up so far, among them one woman.

75 Red Cross Members Enrolled

The Red Cross Roll Call has been extended for another week, same to end as of December 7th. Mokena's quota for this drive is 75 members and according to reports, this mark should easily be reached. The final results will be published in next weeks issue.

The past issues of the News-Bulletin gave you a rough sketch of the national and local activities of the American Red Cross. This was done in order to acquaint every man and woman in this area with the services rendered by the Red Cross and that those who have taken membership cards or otherwise donated are assisting the Red Cross army of mercy in their work of upholding the national defense of our nation and in any disaster or civilian relief.

Subscription Premium Ready

This year we are giving a subscription premium which should appeal especially to the ladies by way of "The Ideal Cake Server". This entirely new type of server handles the most fragile cake without mutilation of the cake or frosting. The prongs engage cake gently but firmly, holding portion securely without touching the fingers. Deposits portion on cake plate without fuss or muss. Portion does not drop off as with old type of server, crumbing cake and spoiling its appearance. Server withdraws easily after portion is placed on cake plate. Blade is made of stainless steel, a solid non-tarnishing metal, no plating to chip or wear off. Handle made of genuine Cataline. Put up in neat cardboard box. This useful and very handy premium is given with every new or renewal subscription to this paper. Subscribe for this paper for an ideal Christmas gift.

Dont delay too long subscribing or renewing your subscription, as there is a true possibility of not being able to get these fine premiums for any length of time. First come, sure served.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN ARRIVE IN NEW LENOX FROM CHINA WAR ZONE

Mrs. Robert Greenman and small sons, Bobby and Billy of Shanghai, China, were guests for several days this week in the home of her husband's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Greenman, in New Lenox.

Mrs. Greenman and sons arrived in San Francisco, last Saturday and left there immediately by plane for Chicago where they at once entered for New Lenox. They left yesterday for Osceola Mills, Penn., where they will live with Mrs. Greenman's parents for the duration of the war. Her husband is a surgeon in the American Navy at Shanghai where the Greenman family has lived for over a year.

As Dr. Greenman was forced to be absent from his family most of the time, he sent them back to the United States for safety.

The Mokena Garden Club reports that Mokena is preparing for one of the finest Christmas lighting contests ever held in this town. Every business place and residence in the village will be lighted with colored electric Christmas lights, either on Christmas trees or on other Christmas decorations. All the lighting effects will be ready to be turned on by December 16th.

Cash prizes will be awarded for the best lighted decoration either in the business district or the residential section. The streets are to be festooned with colored electric lights.

On December 23rd out of town judges will make the rounds of the town and select the prize winners.

The identity of the judges will not be revealed until after the judging is over.

Christmas Program December 22nd

The Mokena Methodist Sunday School will present their Xmas program Dec. 22. A play "The Miracle of the Woolen Shoe" will be presented.

TINLEY ACCIDENT CASE CHARGES NEGROES WITH CARELESS DRIVING

A few weeks ago a truck of the Twelmeyer Dairy of Homewood and an automobile in which a colored family from Logansport, Ind., were riding, figured in a collision at the 159th & Oak Park intersection to the north of Tinley Park in which the truck driver, his assistant and all of the members of the colored family were hurt.

The Twelmeyer Dairy caused the arrest of the colored driver on a reckless driving charge.

The case came up before Judge Walter Dohl in Midlothian Tuesday afternoon. The judge found the defendants, who were not present, guilty of the charge.

Miss Ada Semmler of Mokena who saw the accident, was a witness. The plaintiffs were represented by Attorney F. Sachs, the defendants by Attorney Osgood.

GEO. SANGMEISTER RESIGNS STATE JOB

Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort who has held the job of Highway Maintenance Patrolman for a number of years, resigned his job Thursday. He has taken up a new job as equipment checker for the construction firm of Sanderson & Porter at the ammunition plant at Elwood. George Marti of Mokena who has been working with Mr. Sangmeister on the state truck is taking over the job for the present.

Mr. Sangmeister always endeavored to render honest and efficient service and his many friends wish him success in his new work.

Motorists Warned to Drive With Care As Winter Ice Raises Traffic Hazards

CHICAGO. — Remembering last winter's fall down the front steps, the average person probably will tell you that ice is ice, and that it's always slippery.

He'll be right, but there's more to it than that. Ice is much more slippery when it's wet than when it's dry, at least so far as automobile tires are concerned.

This was the most striking fact brought out by Ralph A. Moyer, associate professor of highway engineering at Iowa State college and chairman of the National Safety council's special committee on winter driving hazards. The committee's annual report was presented before 10,000 persons at the National Safety Congress last fall. All phases of accident prevention were studied at the Congress.

The committee's report is based on the most exhaustive skidding tests ever conducted. For two weeks last February, automobiles were sent spinning over the frozen surface of Lake Cadillac, Michigan, in an effort to gather information which would protect motorists from the hazards of winter driving. Cars were driven over the lake's smooth ice under many different conditions to determine the weather's effect on driving safety.

Thawing Ice Slipperier.

It was found that ice is somewhat sticky at near-zero temperatures. But above 20 degrees and when the sun comes out—beware! Brakes are only half as effective on thawing ice, acceleration is reduced 70 per cent and the maximum speed on curves is 50 per cent lower.

Winter presents a tough problem for traffic safety experts. Traffic death rates go up in all sections of the country as the mercury goes down. Traffic death rates in winter are about 40 per cent higher than summer rates in the northern half of the country, and about 20 per cent in the southern half.

The chief reason, of course, is skidding on snow or ice covered roads. Skidding is involved in only 1 per cent of the accidents on dry roads, but on wet roads the figure is as high as 27 per cent and on snowy or icy roads, up to 50 per cent.

The second most important rea-

"Oscar," the Michigan State Highway department's dummy, meets a pedestrian's fate in front of a skidding automobile, but the real jay-walker hops to safety. Michigan highway officials and the National Safety council co-operated in conducting winter driving tests on frozen Lake Cadillac, Michigan.

son is poorer visibility, resulting from more hours of darkness, snow and sleet storms, and fog.

These hazards can be largely overcome, the committee says, by correct driving practices, adequate equipment, and proper maintenance of the roadway.

Tire Chains Effective.

Use of tire chains is the most practical means of self-help for increasing traction on snow and ice. On rear wheels only, chains cut braking distance and increase acceleration an average of 40 per cent as compared with tires alone. On all wheels chains further decrease braking distance 30 per cent as compared with chains on rear wheels.

Performance of chains is fairly uniform on ice at all temperatures—a big advantage over the variable performance of tires on ice. Speeds should not be much higher with chains than without, however, and on icy curves speeds with chains should be no higher than without them.

Safe driving requires more skill and caution in winter. Mechanical safeguards cannot be relied upon to take the place of ordinary common sense. The important thing is to greatly reduce speed, and keep the car under control at all times.

Wise motorists will investigate weather and road conditions before starting a trip, and if possible postpone or interrupt it when weather conditions are hazardous.

Everything possible should be done to maintain adequate vision. Windshield and windows must be clear of frost and snow. Heaters, windshield wipers and defrosters should be in good condition. Lights should be properly focused and aimed.

"Think Ahead."

The report does not recommend letting air out of tires on slippery roads, since the added traction for stopping is slight and the tendency to skid on curves is increased. Also, tires with good treads, while safer on dry and wet roads, give no better performance on snow and ice than smooth tires.

Thinking ahead—anticipating emergencies—is more important in winter, because sudden stops and turns are impossible on slippery roads.

Watch out for varying conditions of the road surface. Don't take it for granted that because part of the pavement is clear, all of it is free of ice. Anticipate ice around curves and over hills, in shady spots and on bridges. Remember that ice is more slippery when it is thawing. Watch out for the sudden freeze in late afternoon which may convert a wet pavement into an icy one.

Keep a steady foot on the accelerator. Too fast acceleration may spin the wheels, causing a side skid. Slow down gradually. Once a skid starts turn the front wheels in the direction the car is skidding, leave the car in gear, and don't apply the brakes.

Highway departments can do much to reduce winter traffic hazards, the committee reported. Highway officials should strive to keep roads clear by prompt and complete snow removal; establish uniform and effective systems of road condition reporting, and adequately warn the motorist of the presence of snow plows and other equipment, or culvert headwalls, guard rails and other low obstructions covered by drifted snow. They should improve traction on ice by spreading abrasives treated with calcium or sodium chloride.

U. S. Blind Workers Aid National Defense

NEW YORK.—Although they will never be called upon to fight, blind men and women of the country are taking an active part in the nation's preparations for defense.

Hard at work in 43 workshops across the land, they are preparing certain supplies necessary for the government's defense plans, according to Robert W. Irwin, sightless executive director of the American Foundation for the Blind.

Under provisions of the Wagner-O'Day act, federal government departments purchase blind-made products whenever possible and for the past two years blind workers have been supplying these departments with brooms, mops, deck swabs, mattresses and the like at a fair market price, according to Irwin.

In recent weeks the government's order for pillowcases to serve the men in training has kept blind men and women working overtime, and has brought into the wage-earning group more than 400 additional sightless men and women who, up to now, have lacked the chance of employment.

The American Foundation for the Blind acts for the sightless across the country as a national agency. Connected with it is a non-profit marketing agency called National Industries for the Blind. This agency receives orders for blind-made goods, and allocates these orders to those institutions and sheltered shops best equipped to handle them. It is the foundation's aim to give blind men and women the opportunity to earn money for their own support. Work on national defense brings many blind persons opportunity to earn money of their own.

Make-up of new Senate is surprise to Senators themselves. Republicans have tricky problem in cementing effective opposition.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—The new senate in January is going to be a very different group of men from what most of the senators themselves would have predicted, confidentially, last spring. There were quite a few surprises in the primaries, but the election added to them.

One of the biggest surprises of all is not that any particular senator was defeated, but that one of them was re-elected. This is Joseph F. Guffey of Pennsylvania. Most of his colleagues had thought that Joe would run so far behind Roosevelt that he would certainly be retired to private life. When you add to this the fact that privately most of the Democratic senators had thought, following the 1938 election, that Pennsylvania would probably go Republican all the way down the line, the surprise is even greater.

Another big surprise was the defeat of Sen. John G. Townsend of Delaware. Townsend is a fruit grower down in the southern part of his little state, has remained a "farmer" despite being a senator, and was thought to be well liked by his constituents.

His absence will be highly gratifying to the New Deal, and to the Silver state senators, for his constant attacks on the administration's silver-buying policy have been very annoying to both.

Sen. Francis T. Maloney of Connecticut is, like Senator Guffey, one of those whose continued presence will confound the predictors.

LA FOLLETTE STAGES UPSET

Still another of these is Robert M. La Follette. Most of the political forecasters missed the boat rather badly in Wisconsin. One of them, who happened to be a great admirer of La Follette, was convinced after a careful study of the state that the electoral vote would be too close to forecast, but that La Follette was certainly beaten. A majority of the political scouts were sure that Willkie would carry Wisconsin, and agreed that La Follette could not win on account of the soreness occasioned by his endorsement by the New Deal.

Return of Sen. Peter Goettlery of Rhode Island was not a surprise, even to those who had predicted that the electoral votes of this state would go for Willkie.

Illinois leaders themselves were surprised that Sen. James M. Slattery made such a good showing. Even those who thought Roosevelt would get the 29 electoral votes did not think Slattery had much chance of beating "Curly" Brooks.

There were those also who predicted trouble for Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg, especially after the polls began to show how close the state was on the presidency, and how weak the Republican governor was. Vandenberg actually made one of the most spectacular races of any Republican in the country, though pressed closely for this honor by Gov.-elect Dwight H. Green of Illinois.

Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, on the other hand, while he led the national ticket handily, made a much poorer showing than the political wiseacres had expected.

PROBLEMS FACE REPUBLICANS

All politics is peculiar, but the problem confronting the Republican party in cementing an opposition to the administration under the leadership of Wendell Willkie is rather tricky when one considers President Roosevelt's caustic references to "Martin, Barton and Fish" during the campaign.

Bruce Barton is no longer in congress, of course. He was defeated trying to win a seat in the senate from James M. Mead. But Hamilton Fish is still in the house, representing the President's own district, and he is the ranking Republican member of the house foreign affairs committee.

Further, Rep. Joe Martin, whose record on votes affecting foreign affairs were such a campaign target for administration orators from the President down, is still Republican leader in the house.

Over on the senate side Sen. Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who opposed repeal of the arms embargo, and took an almost precisely opposite view on foreign affairs in all respects from that taken by Wendell Willkie, was re-elected by a thumping majority in Michigan.

So Vandenberg can say to himself, with some logic, that the people of Michigan are for HIS policies, rather than those of Willkie.

Then there is also in the senate Robert A. Taft of Ohio, who can look over the record of his electorate in his state in 1938 and 1940 and assume that the people of the Buckeye state are more inclined to his views than those of Mr. Willkie.

It is unlikely that these men will readily agree with Mr. Willkie now that the election is past.

Sclerotherapy And Its Field Of Usefulness

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

AS YOU read new words in medicine, and particularly of the new kinds of specialists, you may wonder whether dividing the medical profession into so many different specialists is really of help to patients.

As a matter of fact, there is so much that is new being discovered and tested in medicine, that no one man could be proficient in all this new knowledge and how to apply it. The family or general practitioner in these days can usually look after the majority of ailments, but because he keeps up to date he knows, for his patients' sake, there are times when a specialist should be consulted.

Dr. Barton

Perhaps the latest specialty is that of Sclerotherapy. "Sclero" means hardening and "therapy" means treatment, so sclerotherapy is treating various ailments by using hardening substances which harden or destroy the unwanted or imperfect tissues. This method of treatment was discredited years ago principally because of the fact that the hardening substances were at fault.

Conditions Which Can Be Helped.

Dr. H. I. Biegeleisen, in Clinical Medicine and Surgery, gives an outline of the various conditions of the body which can now be helped by the skillful surgeon or physician who has given sclerotherapy close study.

1. Disorders of the veins: varicose veins, varicocele, piles or hemorrhoids, vein tumors.
2. Disorders of the arteries. Enlarged arteries such as aneurysms.
3. Cystic (bladder) enlargements: hydrocele, bursitis—bag of water at the joint—knee, elbow, shoulder.
4. Ruptures or hernias.
5. Growth—warts.
6. Miscellaneous: fissures or little cuts, goiter, enlarged turbinates in nose, joints with too much motion.

Shock Needs Prompt And Efficient Care

ONE of the sayings of years ago, "The operation was a success but the patient died," is not used often now because it is so definitely known that the shock of operation, shock of any kind in fact, can bring one very close to death.

In my student days we did not know much about shock but the treatment was to get the patient's head low, body warm, and give a stimulant of some kind.

As time passed and more and more was learned of the damage done to the body by shock and its danger to life itself, new methods of treatment were gradually applied until today shock gets prompt and efficient treatment.

One of the first of the newer treatments was the injection of fluids into the body to add pressure to the blood circulation so that it could be carried to all parts of the body in increased amounts. This tightening-up of the blood vessels causing shock, a condition found in Asiatic cholera for which sodium salts is used, led physicians to use these salts in shock cases with good results.

Transfusions Beneficial.

Dr. John Scudder, department of surgery, Presbyterian hospital, New York, states in Digest of Treatment that even sodium salts and the use of oxygen to increase the amount of oxygen in the blood did not give complete results, as the rate at which the body processes worked still needed to be increased, the storage of sugar in the liver and muscles was still low, and the blood and tissues were still too near an acid condition for safety.

It was then discovered that these three needs could be supplied by the juice or extract of the adrenal and pancreatic gland. Despite all these helps another step in fighting shock was found when transfusions of whole blood or the liquid part of the blood (plasma) were given. Blood transfusion, in addition to supplying plasma proteins (a food) and red blood cells, supplies certain other substances whose beneficial effects can be measured.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Recently I had a metabolism test made which revealed a basal metabolism of plus 13.35 oxygen utilized minus 15.8 litres per hour. Does this mean I have a goitre? Kindly suggest a diet for me.

A.—A metabolism test of plus 13.5 is considered within normal limits which are plus 15, down to minus 85. However, as you are near the borderline, you should ask your physician about rest and diet.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

50,000 Deep Sea Fish, 26 Voters Live in Tiny Marineland, Florida

Marine Studios, world's only oceanarium, contains two huge tanks containing 850,000 gallons of sea water. It is the only one of its kind in the world. Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, founder of Marineland, is shown in the inset.

MARINELAND, FLA.—A spectacular idea, a million dollars, and two huge sea-water tanks housing nearly 50,000 deep sea denizens—these three crystallized officially recently into the ambitious municipality of Marineland, Fla.

With a "population" in which humans are outnumbered, 2,000 to 1, by fish, the settlement was incorporated as a town in the fall of this year. As such Marineland began its census-recognized existence with many advantages over other American villages and with several distinctions unmatched by any city in the world. Here are some:

1. It is the smallest incorporated municipality in Florida, having only 26 qualified registered voters (it takes 25 registered voters to incorporate a municipality).

2. It is believed to be the smallest incorporated municipality in the entire United States.

3. The whole town is built within 300 acres around Marine studios, containing two huge tanks constructed at a cost of nearly a million dollars—raised chiefly through the efforts of C. V. Whitney, New York aviation executive and philanthropist.

4. The tanks, called oceanariums, are the largest in the world and were built especially for motion picture study of the deep sea and its inhabitants.

5. The town was the scene recently—for the first time in scientific history—of the milking of a porpoise. The product was flown by plane immediately to the University of Chicago for analysis.

6. Marineland's porpoises are the only ones in captivity.

7. Marineland is the only place in the world where large marine specimens are fed by hand daily.

8. The largest great manta ray ever exhibited alive in captivity lives in one of the tanks. It has a wing spread of 13½ feet and weighs over 1,500 pounds.

The humans of this unique place, aside from its founding fathers, Whitney and Dr. W. Douglas Burden, of the American Museum of Natural History, are themselves much more than an ordinary group of people because they range from scientists to the divers who care for the fish.

Presiding over the municipality is a good-looking young man, Milton E. Bacon Jr., mayor of Marineland. He is 30 years old, a publicist and not a politician by profession. Many of the men of his town are within draft age limits, Bacon says, raising the possibility that his council and aldermen may have to vote on political issues while wearing mufti.

Bacon's town includes several resident scientists and photographers who daily make intensive studies of Marineland's fish life for scientific journals, magazines and motion pictures.

THE STORY THUS FAR

When Virgie Morgan, widow, and owner of the Morgan paper mill in the Carolina mountain district, turns down a marriage proposal from Wallace Withers, he leaves her house in a rage. Virgie turns him down because she believes he is more interested in possession of her mill than in obtaining a wife. After he has gone, Branford Wills, a young stranger, who has been lost on a mountain-side for three days, finds his way to the Morgan home. Taken in, he is fed and warmed and allowed to remain overnight. Next morning it is learned that Wills, a government employee who has been working with surveyors in the district, has developed pneumonia, due to his exposure. He is forced to remain in the household and Marian Morgan, Virgie's daughter, expresses her dislike with the arrangement for she dislikes Wills.

As Virgie went through the gate her swift eye measured every sign and sound, every spouting feather of steam, every odor. The mill was roaring on—roaring on without her.

Tom was anxious. Virgie felt better when she saw his gaunt face. At least Tom had missed her.

She spent a half-hour telephoning, then was properly indignant.

"Those government men went along back to Washington. Bridges says they said something about waiting for this young Wills, then they decided that probably he'd caught a ride down the mountain. This is a crazy country! If you catch a six-inch fish out of a creek up there in the forest a ranger will chase you a mile—but a man with brains and potentialities can go to waste anywhere and nobody bothers about it!"

But Tom was not worrying about young Mr. Wills. A government man more or less could be lost in the laurel hells indefinitely without loss to the Morgan mill. Tom had other things on his mind.

"Old man Perry Bennett come in." Tom pushed off his wide hat, worried his forelock. "He says he reckons he won't sell you that piece up Tuckaseegee. He says he got a better offer on it."

Virgie's mind stiffened to attention. "Who'd buy that cutover piece—and what for?"

"Champion maybe."

"Champion have got all they want. And even with the Government taking their best acreage, they wouldn't bother with a little thickety piece like old Bennett's. Tom, I think I see a few things you don't know about. You let me handle this."

"I ain't itchin' to handle Perry Bennett."

Virgie remembered presently to pull off her hat and spike it on the hook on the door. The telephone purred. Marian's voice came, thin, with an edge of fright on it.

"Mother, it is pneumonia!"

"Keep your head on," counseled her mother, dryly. "Open the window and keep the fire going. I'll get Ada Clark out there in a little." She hung up. "Where's Lucy?" she demanded.

The chair, the little desk, the covered typewriter on the other side of the office were vacant. So was the prim little wooden costumer in the corner where every morning Lucy Fields, Virgie's secretary, hung up her green wool coat, her small black hat.

Tom pulled out his ponderous watch. "It ain't but four minutes after eight."

"My lord," muttered Virgie wearily, "I thought it was most noon."

Lucy came in, on time to the minute, taking off her overshoes, setting them neatly in the corner.

Lucy Fields was another of those who comforted Virgie Morgan. Lucy's quiet hazel eyes, her husky voice and smooth hair, gave an air of calm to the cluttered bedlam of the office. Lucy had gone to high school with Marian, but when Marian was setting out for college with two trunks full of clothes, and a little roadster of her own, Lucy was learning Gregg and swift, assured ways of knowing exactly which way a lost car of potash might be routed.

Lucy's mother made watermelon-rind pickles and tufted counterpanes for tourists. In good weather the counterpanes hung on clothes-lines on the porch of the Fields' cottage, facing the highway.

Marian was sorry occasionally for Lucy, inviting her out to supper, suavely overlooking Lucy's made-over frocks, her half-soled shoes. But when there were young men at the house on the mountain, with dancing and gaiety, Lucy was not invited.

"She blushes so. She squirms, actually!" Marian justified this omission. "For a girl with the poise she has around the plant, to let the boys rattle her so and make her tongue-tied, is silly—but that's the way Lucy is!"

There were things about Lucy that Virgie was sure she knew. Prim little secrets that Lucy's quiet eyes hid. Still maids who fed on dreams, with no satin or moonlight or rose petals with which to wrap the timid bones of dreams, suffered. Virgie knew. She had been a tongue-tied, tormented girl in hand-me-downs, herself.

She sent Lucy out into the mill for the chemical report.

"She'll have a good day and every word will be spelled right if she sees Stanley Daniels first," she told Tom Pruitt.

There is something sudden, something intrepid and challenging about a mountain town.

A settlement gathered together on the plain marks the place where men paused, where they delayed and rested. But a town under a scarp, with foothold on the iron, hostile knees of the ranges, with quarreling streams gashing a roadway past the heart-straining rise of a ridge for a barbican, has something valorous about it; cocky, self-contained, a little defiant.

Stanley Daniels, chemist for the Morgan mill, lean and thirty, out of the University of Missouri, with young intolerance and the unbearable sting and surge of young ambition in his blood, felt and resented this cool remoteness of the mountain town clustered about the mill.

He was in it and of it, he was of hill stock from the Ozark country, yet this little town had never let him in. He lived at a rambling green house facing the main highway and the railroad; a house needing paint, with a vast asparagus fern on the porch and a row of stiff, indifferent chairs around the wall of the parlor, with five kinds of meat set out in the long dining-room and the linen not always clean.

The landlady, a Mrs. Gill, mothered him, washed his socks for him, her face screwed up at the terrible chemical odors he brought in with him. Her other boarders, widowers torn up by the roots, judges and lawyers in court week, odds and ends of detached humanity, were pleasant enough to him.

He was a young man in the quiet backwater of old lives drifted together. He let the elders admire his youth and take the winds of life, as they blow for youth, vicariously in their faces through him, but he never felt that he belonged.

He was a bird alight, he was a hawk in the wind, something alive briefly, caught in the slow motion of a mountain mill village; sooner or later he would be caught up in a stronger current. But while this hiatus in his life lasted he would ease it by such gracious means as came to his hand. And the most gracious of these gifts was Lucy Fields.

Lucy was tuned deep. She had quiet splendors. She read a great deal and thought a great deal and she was as foreign to her thin, leather-skinned little mother, who wore asafetida around her neck all winter, as the moon is foreign to a barnyard lantern.

Lucy still ached a little because she had not been able to go to college. She winced when her mother said "over yan," or cleaned her dry fingernails with the scissors. She worked hard and believed that Virgie Morgan was the finest woman in the world.

Stanley Daniels was pleased by Lucy, warmed by her admiration, sensed the fine gold under the quiet shyness, generously let her go on incubating little dreams about him while he waited, cannily, committing himself to nothing, waiting for whatever more splendid offering life might be saving for him.

When the whistle moaned at five o'clock he waited for her. She was always conscientiously a little late. She dabbed about, dusted, licked stamps, hated hurrying out of the office. Usually Virgie or Tom had to shoo her out.

"Get along home, Lucy—your beau won't wait out there all night in this raw weather."

The wind dragged at Lucy's skirt and made her thin silk hose feel like coatings of ice on her legs as she went down the cinder road to the gate. But at the sight of Stanley Daniels, hunched in a sheltered spot, warmth flooded her body, sang in her blood, made her cheeks burn and her eyes grow bright.

"Oh, hello!" The wind caught at her voice but could not chill the shine of her eyes. "Were you waiting for me? You must be absolutely stiff. Let's walk fast."

Daniels fell briskly into step. "Is this the best you can do in Carolina—this kind of weather? What about all those songs—moonlight and fields of white, trees in bloom, sweet perfume—all that stuff?"

"Oh, that's for summer. Fall isn't very nice, anywhere—not late fall anyway."

They were at the gate of Daniels' shabby boarding-house. Lucy's home was at the end of a little street farther on. A scrap of a street that ran headlong into the mountain and stopped. They stood for a moment and Lucy's wrists tingled. Would he walk home with her? He never had yet—

Obviously he was not going on. He tipped his hat, set it more firmly on his head, said with a smile, "Better hurry in out of this wind."

Lucy struggled with her disappointment, walked home rapidly, certain what she would find there. A stuffy, too-warm room, littered with threads and snips of cotton, dull lamplight, a smell of frying or the blatant offense of cabbage.

But in her own bleak, frigid bedroom with the few dance programs and wistful souvenirs pinned to the window curtains, she let rebellion tear at her. Life was so unfair. Up there, high on the mountain where lights winked briefly, was Marian Morgan, who had everything, held it all casually as though it were her due!

Stanley Daniels scrubbed the yellowish stains from his fingers, brushed his hair flat, buttoned his coat, and went down to Mrs. Gill's dining-room. There was a caramel fragrance, sharp and tangy. Her pies had run over in the oven again.

"Mock cherry," she bragged, complacently, "and if you can tell the difference, you're the first! Looks like winter was here, don't it? And ain't it awful about that young feller up at Morgans?"

"Is he worse?" Daniels inquired, indifferently.

"I ain't heard if he is. But it's terrible to think what might 'a happened to him out there in them mountains. I put you a place here, Mr. Daniels, because one of my neighbors has decided to come in and eat with us. This is Mr. Wallace Withers, Mr. Daniels. Mr. Daniels works at the mill."

"How do you do, Mr. Withers?" Stanley Daniels regarded the stranger on his left, saw only a well-knit, aging man with a weather-tinted face, narrow nostrils, and eyes that revealed nothing.

"Lived here long, Mr. Withers?" Daniels asked, again, after a little interval of gustatory silence.

"Born here." Withers was terse. "Born in the house where I live now. My father was born there."

"They built it of good heart timber then. No wood like that available any more, at any price," Daniels said.

"The men that built it were heart timber, too." Withers spooned sugar. "No scamp work on that building, like you see nowadays. Say you work for Virgie Morgan?"

"I'm a chemist over there—yes, sir."

"Ain't rushed to death these days, I reckon?"

"Not rushed particularly, but business holds up very well. Mrs. Morgan has managed to hold her markets."

"Making any money, you think?" Stanley Daniels was young, flattered a little by the attention of this old man, he let himself expand a trifle. The mill, in his opinion, was holding its own, but not making the profits that it should. Mrs. Morgan was proud, but too conservative, keeping to old traditions, making a product too good and too expensive for the bulk of her trade.

"You're a pretty shrewd young feller, I see. Own any stock over there?" asked Withers.

"No, sir—I don't think they are selling any."

"If a forward-looking young chap like you owned a piece of it—a good voting block—it might be a good thing, you think? Get new blood in—catch up with these modern notions."

"I think"—Daniels considered the question soberly—"that it would be a good thing. Good for the mill—and for Mrs. Morgan herself."

"Well, young man, I enjoyed talking to you. Not many young fellows talk common sense any more. Know where I live? Brick house out the river road, toward the reservation. Come out and talk to me some rainy evening. I'm always figuring on one thing or another—I like to talk to a business man, especially a young one. We might get together on something, maybe."

"Thank you. I'd be glad to come."

CHAPTER III

Back in the Morgan house Marian Morgan sat in Branford Wills' room watching him.

Ada Clark was having her supper and Marian was on duty and annoyed with the vigil. Illness frightened her, and this young man had displeased her. She was not of the type to forgive easily. She sat on the edge of her chair, ready to escape as soon as possible.

Branford Wills had trouble with his perceptions. They were febrile and wild, they told him fantastic lies. This girl was not there, of course.

He said, in a voice made dry and strange by fever, "You aren't real, of course. I'm sick as the deuce."

She came nearer. Delusions did not wear red wool, did not have fingers cool as lilies.

"A little ice on your tongue?" That was real. "It's pretty bad. I know. I had it once. You'll feel rotten for two or three days, then a lot of terrible pain. They give you whisky and quinine and you're better."

"This is disagreeable for you. You don't like me."

"That doesn't matter." She put more ice in his mouth. "I get furious when people pick on mother. This whole country would have been destitute during these bad times if she hadn't been the shrewdest manager in the world."

He had, so Marian noted, absurdly slender, graceful hands. One nail was broken, it snagged the blanket. Marian brought the scissors.

"Hold still till I fix this."

The twitching heat in his fingers disturbed her. She brought a cool cloth and sponged his palms and the backs of his hands where the tendons stood up and thin, dark hair grew. She felt queerly motherly and tender as she covered the hands with a blanket.

For a year she had laughed at men, evaded them, taken what they had to offer—dances, new cars to ride in, flowers, candy—but so far the men had all been alike. One careless word, one relaxed moment, the guard down for an instant, and they were all alike. Country boys with too much blood in their veins.

But this man did not grip her fingers hard nor look meaningfully up into her eyes. He whispered, "Thank you," when Marian straightened the pillow, and her heart gave a curious jerk.

When Ada Clark came back, Marian went downstairs and wandered aimlessly through the rooms. The windows were dark and beyond the black glass the mountain night was cold and lonely, but the dark loneliness suited her mood. Was this falling in love? She stiffened against that thought. Love was weakness, love was surrender—and she was of the blood of David Morgan, who had tolerated no weakness and never known the meaning of surrender.

"Mrs. Morgan was too conservative."

Bry Hutton telephoned and she answered him curtly, while Lottie stared and listened from the kitchen. No, she said, she didn't want to go out. No, she wasn't mad about anything. She was just not interested.

Virgie Morgan drove up the mountain road toward Hazel Fork on a foggy winter morning. The road was narrow and rutted with outcropping boulders that raked the crank-case of the old truck. Stumps barked the hubcaps on either side. Frost oozed from the ground, making a gray-like sludge over the still-frozen iron of the mountain slope.

She drove slowly and alone. Her booted toe prodded the grunting old engine. She wore riding trousers and a leather coat left open at the throat.

The truck overheated on the stiff grade and she waited for the engine to cool, getting down and trampling the grass, counting the spruce seedlings that were near at hand.

Then behind her on the twisting one-way road, she heard the labored piston-slaps of another straining motor.

"Somebody's lost," she said aloud, trampling on her starter. The truck jangled as the other car came up behind and stopped with a choked gurgle. A black car, heavy and expensive, with two strange men in it. Virgie pulled out of the ruts, her old engine walloping, got out and walked back.

"You've missed your road," she said. "This is nothing but a woods' trail. You'll have trouble with that heavy car if you try to go any further."

"We're looking for a piece of land formerly owned by a man named Pruitt," the taller of the pair said. They were city men of a type Virgie Morgan knew well. All one tint of gray, close-shaven, milled like dollars, the cautious click of shrewd finance in their voices.

"Tom's land is on the other side of the ridge," Virgie told them. "You'll have to walk three-quarters of a mile. Do you belong to that Phillips' outfit? They defaulted on everything they bought in this country."

A GOOD NEIGHBOR

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself.—Luke 10:27.

What shall I do? These words fall from the lips or pass through the minds of millions of men and women each day.

Never does the question go more deeply than when it concerns man's eternal welfare, as it does in our lesson. Always the question indicates that man is not able to decide for himself, and needs the guidance of someone greater and wiser than he. It should lead us back to God, for only He can fully answer it. The good neighbor story of our Lord tells us

I. What to Do to Have Eternal Life (vv. 25-28).

The lawyer (a student of the law of Moses and hence a theologian rather than an attorney) was posing a question to try to entrap Jesus. He was apparently not much concerned about eternal life and assumed that it could be obtained by doing something. We know that eternal life is a gift (John 1:12; Rom. 6:23), but if the man wanted to have it by doing, Jesus was ready to meet him. In response to Jesus' question (v. 26) the lawyer gave Him what the Jews regarded as the summary of the whole law.

The man who can perfectly keep that law will have eternal life, declares Jesus. But note that you must do it, not just talk about it. And you must keep the whole law, "for whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet stumble in one point, he is become guilty of all" (James 2:10, R. V.; see also Gal. 3:10). We see then

II. Why It Cannot Be Done by Man (v. 29).

The lawyer's effort to justify himself by diverting attention to the word "neighbor," which he felt needed definition, showed that he could not do the thing expected of him. The reason for man's failure lies primarily in his own weakness and inability to do what God requires, but is also revealed in his pitiable and futile efforts to justify himself.

The one who seeing his sinfulness and his utter inability to keep God's law casts himself on the Lord and is ready to receive the gift of eternal life; but the one who tries to defend his position and justify himself has shut the door on God's grace and mercy (see Luke 18:9-14). Let us see

III. How Christ Does It for and in Man (vv. 30-37).

The parable of the Good Samaritan answers fully and finally the question, "Who is my neighbor?" by making it clear that anyone who is in need, regardless of race, social position, condition or religion, is our neighbor. The priest and the Levite doubtless had plenty of excuses for not helping the wounded man, but let us remember that excuses, while they may count with men, mean only our condemnation in the presence of God.

It was the spirit of Christ that made the Samaritan show a compassionate and sacrificial interest in the needy man. Only Christ can make you and me like that; His love in the heart is the only "good neighbor program" that will ever work.

But Christ not only enables man to be a good neighbor, He is in fact the true Good Neighbor Himself; He is the Good Samaritan. "Jerusalem is the city of God; Jericho represents the world. The traveler is the type of humanity. Man has fallen in the awful road which leads down; fallen among thieves and is naked, wounded, helpless and hopeless. The failure of the priest and the scribe to help illustrates the inability of the law and the ordinances to save man out of his deplorable condition. The Good Samaritan is the Lord Jesus Christ. He came to the place where the lost are and He alone could have compassion on them. The wine typifies His precious blood He shed to save us. The oil is the type of the Holy Spirit, who applies the blood. He takes care of fallen man found by Christ. The inn is typical of the church, where the Lord through His Spirit cares for His own. The two pence are not typical of two sacraments, but speak of the reward which those receive who under the Holy Spirit care for souls. The promised coming again with a greater reward offered is the second coming of our Lord" (A. C. Gaebelein).

Two truths stand out in our lesson. There is such a thing as being a good neighbor by the grace and blessing of God, and if we are followers of Christ we should be real neighbors. Then there is the One who is Himself our Friend and Brother, the One of whom we sing: "He washed the bleeding sin wounds And poured in oil and wine; He whispered to assure me, 'I've found thee, thou art Mine.'" —(A. J. Gordon)

WOMAN'S SOCIETY OF CHRISTIAN SERVICE HOLDS MEETING

The Woman's Society of Christian Service held their Christmas meeting December 3rd in the Social Hall. The business meeting was called to order at 1:30 p. m., by the President, Mrs. Ada Schellhase who read a beautiful Christmas message. At the conclusion of the business meeting, Mrs. John Swisher, program chairman introduced Mrs. Lahti who had charge of the afternoon's entertainment. Mrs. Lahti read the true story of how the beloved Christmas carol "Silent Night" came to be written. This was of interest to all. Mrs. Lahti's daughter Joan read "The Night Before Christmas" and the story of Mrs. Santa Claus was told by Mrs. Swisher. Christmas carols were sung with Mrs. Mildred Bettenhausen at the piano.

An interesting event of the afternoon was the wee red stocking march to fill a large red stocking which was a novel way used to take care of the silver donation.

At the conclusion of this happy afternoon a delightful Christmas tea was served, the tables being beautifully decorated in keeping with the holiday season. The hostesses were: Florence Anderson, Carolina Andres, Katherine Andres, Lydia Andres, Marie Andres.

A beautiful Christmas prayer was read in unison.

The Chesekhamay Camp Fire Girls met at the home of their guardian, Mrs. Chas. Crist. A committee was decided upon to arrange for a Christmas Party. It was reported that the girls had sold a total of 89 packages of Camp Fire Girl cookies. Two amusing games were played at the close of the meeting.

The PTA meeting which was postponed last Tuesday because of the stormy weather was held in the local school Tuesday night. A very good attendance is reported, over 50 parents and about as many children being present. The program was quite outstanding. Mrs. Albert Cappel's room had charge of it and they rendered a short operetta entitled "Thirty Minutes with Pilgrims."

Mrs. Cappel and Miss Hennessey were the directors of the affair and much credit is due to them for the fine rendition. Everyone present was loud in their praise of it as every one participating did their part well.

Mrs. Stokes Nebeker entertained the bridge club in her home Wednesday afternoon.

MOKENA GARDEN CLUB NEWS
The kiss of the sun for pardon, The song of the birds for mirth, You're nearer God's heart in a garden Than anywhere else on earth.

The December meeting of the Garden Club was held in the home of Mrs. Harry Mall. Garden Club members are very proud of the new Year Books which they received at this meeting. The program which followed the business of the day was very interesting and inspiring. Christmas decorations, for both inside and outside the house were on display, arranged by the different members. Reports on the Christmas customs of other lands were enjoyed by all. The growth of holly and mistletoe was also discussed.

The table arrangement by our hostess, for a Christmas table, was beautiful.

The program ended with an exchange of presents and we are sure that each member present is anxious for Christmas to come so that she can try out one of her new ideas.

The January meeting, first Tuesday at 2:00 p. m., will be held at the home of Mrs. John Walsh.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Spiess and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Deardmore of Joliet attended the Stock Show at Chicago Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Walsh of Manhattan and Roy Erdman of Mokena also attended the Stock Show Tuesday.

MOKENA SCHOOL NEWS

The school Christmas program this year will be given by the pupils in grades six through ten. The first five grades will give a program in the spring and next year they will present the Christmas program. This alternation of groups will make it possible for all the pupils giving the programs to participate.

This year an operetta titled "When Christmas Comes" will be presented by the last six grades. The school band will offer a program of appropriate songs. The program will be given on December 20, at eight o'clock p. m.

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Half a century ago on Nov. 27, 1890, Mr. George Gebert and Miss Selma Netche, both of Chicago were united in marriage and to-day both are 74 years old and are in the best of health. Mr. and Mrs. Gebert resided in Chicago for 45 years, where Mr. Gebert worked as a gas fitter but five years ago, moved to their home in Homer, where they are still residing. Mr. Gebert came from a family of 11 children, 9 of which are still living and Mrs. Gebert was one of 6 children, all of whom are living.

To this union were born two daughters, Mrs. Lillian Gustarene and Mrs. Elsie Egleshan, both residing in Chicago and one son, Fred of Homer. There are also 4 grandchildren.

Saturday evening, the Knights of Pythians Invincible Lodge 353 entertained in their honor at 3012 E. 79 Place in Chicago. Approximately 150 relatives and close friends from Iowa, Indiana and Illinois, welcomed the couple upon their arrival. A short program was enjoyed, one of the most interesting parts being a mock wedding, sponsored by the Pythian Sisters.

Luncheon was served at long tables decorated in gold and white, centered by a large wedding cake, decorated with yellow roses. Following the lunch, Mr. and Mrs. Gebert were presented with a "Pot of Gold."

Those attending from Homer were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Gebert and son, Fred Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Ben Ingersoll, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hiller, Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Reiter and son, Lloyd and C. Guthrie.

Fueling at the ROXY This Week

Like fire across the prairies, a great and ruthless fuel swept the pains in, "The Westerner," starring the superb performances of Gary Cooper, Water Brennan and Doris Davenport, coming to the Roxy Theatre, at Lockport, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

This Friday and Saturday, the Roxy will feature, "Three Men From Texas," with William "Hop-Along" Boyd and Russell Hayden, in another first flying lead singing western thriller.

The Roxy Theatre, Wednesday and Thursday, will present an unusually fine twin bill. The first bill will be "Christmas in July", a story of a young man who worked and won a contest, spending the money before he received his check, starring Dick Powell and Ellen Drew. This merry mad-cap spending spree is hotter than firecrackers and merrier than any Christmas. The second feature will be "World in Flames", expounding uncensored actual scenes from the war torn regions of Europe, where life has been destroyed under the iron hands of dictators.

PART-TIME CLASS OPENS

The part-time classes in Vocational Agriculture will begin next Monday night, December 2nd at 8:00 in the Bloom Agriculture Building. This class is open to young farm men between the ages of 18 and 30, and all are urged to enroll at this meeting and become regular members. The meetings will be held every Monday night for 15 weeks.

The first three meetings will be devoted to the study and discussion of concrete mixing and construction problems applicable to the farm situation. This study should prove very interesting and practical as the Agriculture department has been fortunate in securing from the University of Illinois equipment for mixing and testing of concrete beams made in various ways. After completing the unit on concrete, other important agriculture problems chosen by the class members will be brought before the group for study and discussion.

FRANKFORT

Mrs. Herbert Kohlhaugen

Last Tuesday evening Miss Marietta Rahm was honored with a personal shower given in the home of Mrs. Lester Christiansen. Aeroplane busses was played and prizes were awarded to Mrs. Clarence Paufer, and Miss Marietta Christiansen. A guest prize was presented to the bride-elect. A two-course luncheon was served. Miss Rahm will become the bride of Mr. Franklin Christiansen on Dec. 8 at 3 o'clock in St. Peter's Evang. and Ref. Church. All friends are invited to attend.

Last Sunday, Miss Rahm was honored by a miscellaneous shower given by Mrs. Arthur Marti and Mrs. Stanley Williams in the Green Garden Hall. Aeroplane bunco was the means of entertainment. The bride-to-be received many beautiful and useful gifts. A delicious luncheon was served carried out in the bride's chosen colors of rose and blue.

Miss Ruth Jarchow was the honored guest at a miscellaneous shower Wednesday night in the Frankfort Hall given by Mrs. Conrad Oetter. Mrs. Richard Oetter, Mrs. Edward Oetter, Mrs. Arthur Subbert, Mrs. Elmer Reichert and Miss Alma Andresen. Fifty was played at twelve tables with awards going to Mrs. Henry Pieper and Mrs. Wm. Jarchow of Joliet and to Mrs. Roy Lembke of Tinley Park. A duplicate prize was given to the bride. A lovely corsage was presented to Miss Jarchow by her aunts. After the opening of her many beautiful and useful gifts a lovely luncheon was served carried out in the bride's chosen colors of two shades of blue. Miss Jarchow is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jarchow and became the bride of Mr. George Andresen of Orland Park Nov. 30.

Last Sunday, Mr. George Minger was honored by twenty four relatives who came in to remind him of his 73rd birthday. Supper was served and a social evening was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bettenhausen entertained the following relatives at dinner last Sunday. Mrs. John Sippel, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Sippel and Barbara Ann of South Dakota, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Koehler and son Freddie, Mrs. Emma Koehler and Junior of Blue Island and Miss Mildred Sippel of Chicago.

The Independent Basketball teams played Manteno last Sunday. The lightweights of Frankfort lost 29 to 14 and the heavy weights lost their first game of the season by a score 25 to 20. Their next games will be Dec. 8 with the Homewood teams. They are looking forward to the great attraction of playing the famous "Flying Swedes" who will meet the heavy weight team Dec. 10 in the gymnasium at 8 o'clock. The teams are also sponsoring a dance Dec. 13 in the Frankfort Public School gymnasium with Lea's Melody Boys furnishing the music.

The local unit of the Red Cross held meeting last week in the village hall. The following officers were elected: Rev. Rudolph Malek, chairman; Mrs. Glenn Folker, vice chairman; Mrs. Blanche Mitchell secretary, and Mrs. George Andrew, treasurer. A membership drive which was made during last week has been extended for another week. Mrs. Blanche Mitchell who was appointed to select her helpers is indeed thankful for the cooperation she received during this campaign.

Mr. Philip Triem, who recently had the misfortune of falling from a hay-loft and broke his arm and leg, was removed to his home last Sunday. He is convalescing very satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. Emil Lenhardt and son Harold left Nov. 28 for Miami, Florida to spend two weeks vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Clark Baker.

Mr. E. J. George, E. J. and E. agent is a patient in Silver Cross Hospital.

The Women's Club will have their Christmas party Dec 19 in the home of Mrs. Walter Pfaff. A 10 o'clock pot luck dinner will be served. The regular Christmas exchange will take place.

Christmas season is in the air as local churches and schools are planning programs. Watch for definite dates in the coming issues.

Mr. Charles Bettenhausen, who died on Nov. 26 in his home in Chicago, was born on Mar. 26, 1881 in Frankfort Township and spent his life here until 1925 when ill health forced him to retire from farm work, and moved into Chicago. He was married to Sophie Woeltje, who survives him as well as two daughters, Mrs. Ruth Hood and Miss Delphine Bettenhausen and two grandchildren. Mr. Bettenhausen had been in ill health for many years.

Funeral services were held on Friday afternoon in St. Peter's Evang. and Ref. Church Frankfort with Rev. G. S. Gerhold officiating. Burial was made in Green Garden Cemetery.

ORLAND PARK

THE LADIES GUILD

FARM HOUR:—

You are invited to send in announcements of rural and church organizations for free broadcast service. When possible, such items may be given on the Social Column, also. On Saturday, Dec. 7th, the Seward Church Young People will be guests of the Farm and Home Editor, furnishing the main feature; the DuPage Presbyterian Church will furnish the music for the program.

Camp will hold their regular meeting in the Legion Hall on Thursday evening, December 26th. Following the meeting a Christmas program will be given with the usual exchange of gifts, not to exceed 25c in value.

RED CROSS DRIVE EXTENDED

Due to the inclement weather and the difficulties of transportation, the annual Red Cross Roll Call drive for Orland Township is no where near completed and has therefore been extended to allow a more complete canvass of the district. To those who in previous years have made their annual subscription and to those who wish to join for the first time, an appeal is made that they expedite matters by mailing their subscription to the local chairman, Mrs. S. S. Knox, Box 103, Orland Park, Ill.

The Orland Park Village Board will meet next Monday evening. The Orland Park Fire Department will also meet the same night.

Mrs. W. J. Lindquist who has been a patient in the Mayo hospital in Rochester, Minn., is recuperating nicely at the home of her brother in Chicago.

Orland garages had a busy day Tuesday thawing out frozen cars, some having to be towed in from the highways.

The Orland Park Boosters Club held their first regular meeting in the Legion Hall Tuesday night. Arrangements have been made to have the local basketball team play other teams at the Tinley Park gym.

Orland 66-Matteson 43
Last Friday night the Orland Park High School basketball team played the Matteson team. Matteson's inexperienced, but fighting, freshmen and sophomore forced Orland's experienced juniors beyond 40 points before our superior reserve power overcame them; but Matteson carried on the battle until the final whistle. Matteson's fighting spirit might have been enough if Orland had not been hitting about every other shot.

Bill Maddox and Franklin Uthe, guards, added considerably to the scoring of forwards, Pete Uthe and Bob Hewson. Orland shows promise offensively if their basket eyes don't fail, but they must develop a much better offense, if they are to win many games. This game was Matteson's first for this season.

Before the game, one of Chuck Maddox's friends suggested that they should go on the floor, fight, and make a point for each of Chuck's many unfortunate stitches. Perhaps this accounts for the high score.

One of Orland's peppy cheerleading teams composed of Ruth Gee, Virginia Gee, and June Schussler, performed for an enthusiastic group of Orland followers.

Bill Schakow added much to the occasion with music from his accordion.

The line-up is as follows: Robert Hewson, Eugene Uthe, Milton Francis, Robert Arnold, Bill Maddox, Norman Jorgenson, Franklin Uthe, Robert Estand, Arthur Beagley.

MOKENA

Primary Room—The children are decorating the room for Christmas, and are starting to make plans for their Christmas party with the help of Student Council.

The room misses Harold Homering of third grade who was hurt in an accident.

Intermediate Room—The fifth grade has been making some very interesting experiment in geography. The pupils took an orange and compared it with the shape of the globe. The peeling was then removed and compared with a flat map of the world. An egg was also used to compare with the globe.

The room is very attractively decorated for Christmas.

Gunter Theil and Charles Holm are drawing a fireplace with colored chalk on the blackboard.

Junior High Room—Mrs. Cappel's room had the Assembly Program, Wednesday, Nov. 20. The program was as follows: The pledge of Allegiance, led by Richard Needham. In Flanders Field, by Elda Mae Schultdt Piano solo—Doris Spiess. Song of sixth grade. Thirty minutes with the Pilgrims by the entire 7th and 8th grade; John Cushman, father, Robert McGregor; Mary Cushman, mother, Shirley Marti; Patience Cushman, daughter, Violet Hurley; Isaac Allerton, a pilgrim, Irvin Holm; Edward Carver, a pilgrim, Billy Hommerding; Squanto, an Indian, Gordon Smith. The program was closed with "God Bless America."

High School Room—The sophomore history class is making maps, time graphs, and writing themes on discoveries, important happenings and inventions.

Many of the Freshman class will be helping their Dads do Algebra equations—Reason—The Freshman are now starting Factoring!!

Music News—Chorus practice will be discontinued until after Christmas vacation, due to having daily practice for the Christmas program.

Jack Marti has now entered the band, in which he plays an alto saxophone.

Sports—The last game of basketball was played at Manhattan on Friday, Nov. 29. The Mokena grade school lost by a score of 28 to 13. The game between the high school teams was very close with Manhattan winning by one point, making the score 32 to 31.

The next game of the season will be played at home with Mokena on Friday Dec. 6 at 7:30.

The flag pole has been out of order and a new pole and chain have been ordered.

Com. Wm. Busse Highly Honored

Children, grandchildren and great grandchildren of County Commissioner Wm. Busse gathered at the home of the commissioner Sunday afternoon in recognition of the fifty years that the "head of the Busse clan" has been a public servant of Cook county. Two days earlier the county board of commissioners had passed a special resolution honoring Mr. Busse for his half century of public service.

The gathering Sunday was purely a family affair, but with seven children, all living, 22 grand children and 6 great grandchildren, it was a large household and a rather large family reunion. There was no set program and no formal congratulatory program. Moving pictures were taken of the members of the family as they individually congratulated Mr. Busse.

All of Mr. Busse's seven children are living, and all of them reside in Mt. Prospect. They are William, Jr., Albert E., Fred, Mrs. Martha Froemling, Mrs. Mathilda Ehard, Mrs. Sophie Mueller and Mrs. Helen Bierman.

"It was only by chance," states Mr. Busse, "that I entered public service. James H. Gilbert had been elected Republican sheriff of Cook County in 1890. My name was suggested by Wm. Thieman and sponsored by George Struckman, of Bartlett, who were then prominent Republican leaders of suburban Cook county. They called at my father's home last, one night and Dad promised them that I would accept the job of deputy sheriff. I was not sure that I wanted it. I had recently purchased a 160 acre farm. I was told that previous deputy sheriffs only work three days a week and their office did not interfere very much with their private business.

"Sheriff Gilbert was a different kind of a public official. He insisted that every deputy be at his desk at nine o'clock every morning. I sold my farm and remained a deputy, an office which I held ten years until 1900 when I was elected county commissioner. When first appointed, I was hesitant about accepting a job that I thought was too big for a farmer. If I have attained any success it is due to the early training given me by my parents, emigrants from Germany, who settled in Elk Grove in 1848."

Mr. Busse on entering the county board was appointed a member of the road and bridge committee and has continued on that committee during his entire membership. He took a very active part in the organization of the forest preserve district and has been a strong exponent for more and bigger playgrounds for the people of Cook county.

The veteran member was president of the board two years and as a member has served under nine presidents of the county board, five of whom were Democrats.

The attached resolution was adopted today, November 29th, by the Board of Commissioners of Cook County in honor of Commissioner William Busse's fifty years of public service.

RESOLUTION BY PRES. SMITH
December 1, 1940, Commissioner William Busse completes fifty years of service as an official of Cook County.

The half century of his tenure marks an epoch in the history of his county and of his country replete with changes in social philosophy and political administrations incomparable to any in the history of our government.

Mr. Busse entered the public service December 1, 1890, as the youngest Deputy Sheriff ever appointed in Cook County; serving in that office for ten years, he resigned to accept membership on the Board of Commissioners of Cook County, to which office he was elected in 1900, and of which body he is now a member.

During his service as County Commissioner Mr. Busse has held the chairmanship of each of the committees, and as President of the Board of Commissioners from 1907 to 1910, was instrumental in the erection and completion of the present Oak Forest Infirmary. His service on the Board witnessed the establishment and construction of every major activity in which it is now engaged, the present County Building, the County Hospital, the present County Jail and Criminal Courts Building and the Juvenile Home were all conceived and erected during his terms of office. The Forest Preserves of Cook County, born in their conception and in their accomplishment, were largely the responsibility of William Busse. The elaborate and efficient system of County Highways was not constructed without his sound counsel and advice. Yet it is not alone his contribution to the physical progress of the County which has earned for him the lofty place he occupies in the esteem and affection of the people of Cook County. A rigid code which has held him steadfast to his oath of office and to the interests of the public he so ably represents, caused him particularly to interest himself in all the charitable activities of the County. His attention and energy have ever been directed at the fiscal affairs of the government he serves, and his keen analysis of Cook County's financial affairs has made him a ready and effective foe of those who would encumber government with fantastic and extravagant schemes.

As Mr. Busse's tenure has bridged every social and political upheaval in the last fifty years, so has his service transcended partisanship; he is a member of a majority or a minority group, his advice, counsel, industry and judgment have been sought and gratefully received by each administration. His wisdom and experience having ever been exercised on behalf of the people of the County and its institutions, he has by his integrity and devotion to duty carved in the history of his county a place that is both inspirational and monumental.

NOW, THEREFORE, because of these presents,
BE IT RESOLVED by his associates on the Board of Commissioners of Cook County that we extend to Commissioner William Busse, on the occasion of his completion of fifty years as a public official, the kindest felicitations and grateful appreciation of the people of Cook County for his lifetime of public service and our own sincere gratitude and affection to a colleague whom we know to be an ideal officer, a true patriot and a worthy friend, and our happiness in the knowledge that his energy and health presage for him many more years of effective time.

Mr. and Mrs. Pellinate and children moved to Chicago Sunday.

S. Tyler had three ribs broken in trying to help push a car out of a ditch. He is improving.

Doris Tyler underwent an operation recently. She has returned to school.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Goering of West Chicago spent Sunday at the Ernest Goering home.

Cites Reasons Crime And War

Special—Responsibility for the rise in crime, the decline in moral standards and the prevalence of war during the last 25 years may be largely traced to a growing disregard of eternal retribution, Dr. Walter A. Maier of Concordia Seminary declared today in his nation-wide Lutheran Hour broadcast.

"The belief in heaven and hell is disappearing," the noted theologian said. "Millions of people know the word 'heaven' principally as another word in a popular song, or part of the title of a moving picture. Many are so concerned with the material pleasures of this life that they spurn any serious thought of retribution beyond the grave. Their philosophy of life calls for no particular standard of morality and they are unwilling to be bound by the restraints of God's word."

As a consequence of this neglect, the evangelist asserted, the last quarter century has seen more crime, immorality and war than any like period in human history. He urged the churches to unite in pulpit messages on the theme of eternity and to remind the people that faith in the resurrected Christ is the heavenly guide to eternal salvation.

Referring to skeptics who question the authenticity and the divine origin of the Bible, Dr. Maier asserted that great thinkers of every century have humbly acknowledged the truth of the statement of faith accepted by all Christian churches, "I believe in the resurrection of the body."

Launch Rural Safe Driving Award Plan

The Illinois Agricultural Association launched today a project sponsored jointly by its Rural Youth and Safety Departments which will give recognition to the safe driving accomplishments of the 9,000 Rural Youth members in Illinois, according to Charles N. Glover, Assistant farm adviser with the Cook County Farm Bureau.

"We feel that rural young people are safe drivers," Mr. Glover said. "It is also felt that good driving should be rewarded. Every person affiliated with the Cook County Farm Bureau rural youth group will be eligible to receive the 'Rural Youth 1 Year No-Accident' award which is in the form of a flasher license plate emblem, and will be given to all drivers in this group who between November 1, 1939 and November 1, 1940, have had no motor vehicle accidents."

A tentative study of the insurance records of this group indicates that approximately 5000 of them in the state are eligible to receive the award. It is contemplated that the No-Accident recognition system will be continued from year to year in the form of 2, 3, 4 and 5 year emblems, according to the IAA.

Million And Half Trees Have Been Sold To Farmers

A million and a half trees out of 10,000,000 available to Illinois farmers for new plantings have already been sold, according to L. B. Culver, associate in forestry at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture.

Since the trees are being ordered so rapidly, Culver suggests that the farmers do their "forest shopping" early, not only to avoid the rush, but also to avoid not being able to obtain the kind of trees desired.

Last year some persons waited too long to place their orders and were unable to get the kind of trees they wanted. Although there are still about 8,000,000 available, the rate at which they are being ordered indicates that 1941 may bring a repetition of 1940.

Of the 8,536,455 trees now available, 4,606,230 of them are hardwoods and 3,930,225 are conifers, according to Culver.

A 40-page circular No. 477, "Forest Planting on Illinois Farms," tells how to plan, plant and care for the farm forest planting. A free copy may be obtained from local farm advisers or the university.

FOR YOUR INBETWEEN HOLIDAY PARTIES
(See Recipes Below)

Expected, and unexpected situations too, arise during the holiday seasons. People drop in just to wish you a "Merry Christmas." Others are invited for some specified time. The night before Christmas you may want to have a "trimming the Christmas tree" party. Or, your daughter may ask a few of her chums in for a small party.

Whether you expect to be on the entertainment committee for a family reunion, or just a hostess for a casual holiday gathering, it's a good idea to put on your thinking cap and plan some easy-to-prepare mass refreshments.

Sandwich makings that the guests can put together themselves are always a good choice for quick-party menus.

Fruit refrigerator cakes are the perfect solution for chief cooks who want to play the role of leisurely hostess without last minute culinary responsibilities. They are practical, too, from the standpoint of using leftover fruits that might be cluttering up the refrigerator. These delicacies always have a glamorous "party" look and appeal to every sweet tooth; but, best of all, they can be made in jig time in the morning, leaving the afternoons and early evenings free for "fun."

Peach Refrigerator Cake.

(Serves 8)

1½ cups (1 can) sweetened condensed milk
¼ cup lemon juice.
1 cup canned sliced peaches (well drained)
2 egg whites (stiffly beaten)
24 chocolate wafers

Blend sweetened condensed milk and lemon juice thoroughly. Stir until mixture thickens. Add sliced peaches, which have been well drained. Beat egg whites until stiff and fold into mixture. Line narrow oblong pan with wax paper. Cover with fruit mixture. Add layer of wafers, alternating with the fruit mixture, finishing with a layer of wafers. Chill in refrigerator 6 hours, or longer. To serve, turn out on small platter and carefully remove wax paper. Cut in slices, and serve plain or with whipped cream.

Refrigerator Fruit Cake.

2½ cups graham cracker crumbs (rolled fine)
½ pound marshmallows (cut fine)
1½ cups dates (cut fine)
½ cup nut meats (broken)
½ cup thin cream
¼ cup Maraschino cherries (cut fine)

Combine ingredients in order listed. Mix well. Press firmly into a tube pan lined with heavy wax paper, buttered. Chill thoroughly in refrigerator over night, or longer. Slice and serve with whipped cream.

Gingerbread Waffles.

(Serves 6)

1 cup molasses
½ cup butter
1 teaspoon soda
½ cup sour milk
1 egg (beaten)
2 cups cake flour
2 tablesp. ginger
½ teaspoon salt

Heat molasses and butter to boiling point. Remove from fire and beat in the soda. Add sour milk, beaten egg, and the flour which has been sifted with the ginger and salt. Mix well. Bake in hot waffle iron. Serve with whipped cream and a dash of nutmeg.

Refrigerator Fruit Pudding.

(Serves 8 to 10)

½ pound prunes
1-inch stick cinnamon
6 whole cloves
½ cup seeded raisins
½ cup brown sugar
1 pkg. lemon flavored gelatin
¾ cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
½ cup dried figs (cut fine)
¼ cup citron (cut fine)
¼ cup almonds (cut fine)

Soak prunes in sufficient water to cover, until soft. Add cinnamon and cloves and simmer until prunes are tender. Drain, and when cool, stone and chop prunes. Add 1 cup of the prune juice to raisins and brown sugar and heat to boiling point. Dissolve gelatin in hot mixture and blend in orange and lemon juices. Chill until almost thickened, then add chopped prunes and all remaining ingredients. Pour into one large mold or individual molds and chill overnight.

Plum Pudding.

(Serves 6)

½ cup milk
3½ cups soft bread crumbs
¼ pound suet (ground)
½ cup sugar
2 eggs (separated)
½ cup seedless raisins
¼ cup currants
¼ pound figs (cut fine)
¼ cup citron (sliced thin)
½ teaspoon nutmeg
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon cloves
¼ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup apple cider

Scald milk and pour over bread crumbs. Cool. Cream ground suet in warm bowl. Add sugar, cream together thoroughly, and add well-beaten egg yolks. Combine these two mixtures. Add cut fruits together with spices and salt. Add cider. Lastly, fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into well-greased pudding mold. Cover tightly and steam for 6 hours. Serve with hard sauce.

(Serves 8)

½ cup butter
1½ cups sugar
3 eggs
½ cup maraschino cherries (cut fine)
½ cup nut meats (broken)
½ cup crushed (drained) pineapple
1 tablespoon lemon juice

Left-over sponge or angel food cake (sliced)

Cream butter, add sugar slowly and beat well. Add beaten egg yolks and blend thoroughly; then add cherries, nut meats, crushed pineapple and lemon juice. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites.

Line a shallow pan with thinly sliced left-over cake and top with a layer of the filling; repeat until all filling is used, ending with a layer of cake. Chill overnight. To serve, cut in slices and top with whipped cream.

Graham Cracker Dessert.

(Serves 6)

3 tablespoons butter
½ cup sugar
2 eggs
½ cup milk
1½ cups graham cracker crumbs (rolled fine)
2 teaspoons baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Cream butter and add sugar gradually, while beating constantly. Separate eggs and add egg yolks which have been well-beaten. Combine graham cracker crumbs with the baking powder and salt. Add this mixture alternately with the milk to the butter and sugar mixture. Add vanilla extract. Beat egg whites and fold in carefully. Bake in two well-greased layer-cake pans in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees) for approximately 25 minutes. Serve as a dessert, putting the two layers together and topping with whipped cream.

Better Baking.

Quality in food is what Americans look for today. Not only must the ingredients be good, but they must be combined in the best way possible for perfect results. Formerly, just the thought of baking pies, cakes or breads would frighten the inexperienced cook. Today, the most timid beginner has little difficulty in following recipe directions.

Miss Howe's cookbook "Better Baking" contains such recipes, simple and easy to understand, and easy to follow; and the results will do the young cook proud.

You may secure your copy of her cookbook by writing to "Better Baking," in care of Eleanor Howe, 919 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and enclosing 10 cents in coin.

How the Idea Started

Christmas Candles

Christmas tree candles date back to the very earliest times in the Christian era. The Yule candle, of goodly size, lighted early Nativity celebrations. The lighting of candles is indeed a universal religious and national custom. Candle lighting featured the Norse mid-winter festival of the turning of the sun. The Jewish Feast of Chanukah or Lights is also celebrated similarly at the same season.

Christmas Gifts

Romans exchanged gifts during gay celebrations. But giving of presents of course goes back much earlier. The Romans, however, gave it clearer identity as a part of their festival program. Christmas boxes and cards of today have a link to the ancient Roman festivities. In France, gifts are distributed to children New Year's eve instead of Christmas. In England, Germany, Italy, and most everywhere else, the custom is like in the United States. Santa comes a-visiting at Christmas.

Christmas Wreaths

In ancient times the Teutons regarded holly as a symbol of good luck. The custom was widespread of hanging evergreens in the interior of dwellings. Later the legend was widely circulated that all fruiting things blossomed and bore fruit the night of the Nativity. Holly came also to symbolize the crown of thorns worn by Christ. The Puritans, however, regarded holly and mistletoe decorations as pagan in nature, and they therefore were outlawed.

Christmas Stockings

St. Nicholas rides Woden's horse on Christmas eve in Holland. There the children put up their wooden shoes in the chimney corners as a stop signal for the merry fellow. Children of France followed the custom by placing their shoes for Bonhomme Noel by the hearth. In England and the United States, boys and girls improved on the idea by hanging up stockings. These can hold more gifts.

Christmas Hymns

The Puritans predicted the disappearance of Christmas carols and did what they could to discourage the custom of singing them. But it has grown more and more a part of the Christmas tradition which began in early Christian days in Rome. The French Noel, dating to the Eleventh century, and the German Weihnachtslieder, have the same origin.

National Christmas Tree

Scene of Annual Service

The United States has a national Christmas tree! It is not a spruce, fir or hemlock, but a giant Sequoia which stands more than 267 feet high. The tree is located in General Grant National park, 64 miles east of Fresno, Calif. Devotional and patriotic services held beneath the tree each year since it was selected in 1925 are broadcast over a nationwide network.

THE LAST PAIR

Scene: Some desolate spot on this earth.

Characters: The last two survivors of a world war, a pair named Stoopey and Droopey.

Stoopey (as a hand grenade goes over his head)—Hah! You missed that time!

Droopey—I got the fellow behind you.

Stoopey—There's nobody behind me. Or behind you either. They've all been killed off.

Droopey—Gosh! has it got down to that? Are we really the only two left?

Stoopey—Yep.

Droopey—Well, who won?

Stoopey (sadly)—It's still a tie. I guess you and I'll have to fight it out.

Droopey—Hold on a minute . . . we oughta think that over. If I win you're left all alone. If you win I'm all left all alone. There wouldn't be any fun in that.

Stoopey—It might be an excellent idea. That makes everything a total loss. The complete end of a total war, see? No more arguments, no more back talk, no more alliances, no more trouble with anybody.

Droopey—That would be terrible. Stoopey—But it would be what we have been working toward all along!

Droopey—No; the winner would still have his hate left. What would he do with that?

Stoopey (thoughtfully)—That's the hard part. A man would have to hate somebody. It would be part of his nature after all these years.

Droopey—Yeah. But there'd be nobody he could hate, except himself. You couldn't hate yourself.

Stoopey—There would be nothing else to do. And at this stage of hatreds it would be easy.

Droopey—There must be some way out. Let's compromise. Let's call it off. You and I as the last two survivors can then hate each other and be quite happy about it.

Stoopey (suspiciously)—How do I know I could trust you? The first thing I know you might soften up and want to be friendly.

Droopey—There was a time when you wouldn't have thought that a bad idea.

Stoopey—I know, but this hate business has gone on so long it's become a habit. I'm an addict. So are you.

Droopey—Maybe you're right. O. K.! Stop worrying. If I give you my word to keep hating you 100 per cent I'll keep it. And I'll expect as much from you. (Wearily) Say, anyhow? I forget.

Stoopey—A better world. Everybody was determined to get it if it took the last man.

Droopey—And it damned near did!

Stoopey (looking around)—Well, anyhow, we're near that new order, that new setup.

Droopey—Boy, you can have it! Capital gone, the economic system's gone, the bankers are gone, the critics are gone, barriers are gone, frontiers are gone . . . everything.

Stoopey (his eyes falling on something in the wreckage)—Look. There's part of a broadcasting set over there. With just you and I left it's going to be awfully lonesome. We could put it together and still have the radio.

Droopey—What! and listen to EACH OTHER!

(He shoots Stoopey, who doesn't seem to care much.)

IS THERE NO LIMIT?

"God Bless America" is a pretty fine patriotic number, and it has become the American song of the crisis, but something should be done to protect it in the clinics. Night club comics sing it immediately following pretty raw interludes, masters of ceremony call for it after their most risqué moments, and, believe it or not, in one Broadway picture and vaudeville house a fat, coarse, faded female blues shouter swings into it with a comedian, after they have both been giving a club-smoker atmosphere to the proceedings. And with an enormous American flag as their backdrop! It may be too much to expect them to see anything wrong about it, but isn't it time the audience started throwing things?

WITHOUT GAS MASKS

"Hitler and Molotov Talk for Three Hours."—Headline.

And they promised there would be no gas warfare this time!

Elmer Twitchell saw a friend of his going downtown the other night with his wife, his wife's mother and his wife's two sisters. "Under convey," he muttered.

Mr. Green and Mr. Lewis want a labor peace no matter who gets hurt at it.

Tin of Sunshine

The idea that sunshine can be canned, like beef or peas, seems preposterous. But sunshine has been bottled in Florida and taken by plane to New York, where it was released.

This is how it was done. The sunshine was held in a luminescent powder already in the bottle, and frozen in liquid air. It was then sealed and taken to New York, where the glass tube was thawed by being placed in water. As the air melted, those watching were astonished to see the powder glow brilliantly and throw off sufficient heat to fry a piece of fish.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and "cure" it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such as one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal, Kellogg's All-Bran. Eat it often, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek. If your condition is chronic, it is wise to consult a physician.

HIGH PRICES

Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all.

They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market, that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

Four-Poster Doll Bed For Santa to Bring

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

NOBODY knows better than I how many willing helpers good old Santa has. Hundreds of you have written me that you have made gifts from directions in this column and in SEWING Books 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5. Book 6 is now ready and as it goes into the mail I want you all to know that I have a very real feeling of friendship for you who find joy in making things with your hands. Your letters keep me posted about the things you want to know. Refurbishing old furniture, curtaining difficult windows, new slip covers, rug and patch work designs, lamp shades, dressing tables, smocking, gift and bazaar novelties—you have asked for these and they are in the new Book 6. It also contains a description of the other booklets in this series.

And here is something that is not in any of these booklets. This tiny four-poster doll bed will be just the thing for Santa to leave beside some one's big bed on Christmas Eve. After the cigar box, spoons and clothes pins are glued together and enameled you will have a grand time making the bedding, pillow and coverlet. Send order to:
